

Your new website: before and after

Will Fraley, Attorney at Law · willfraleylaw.com · report dated 3 October 2026

The one-page summary

The new site is ready to put online. It has the same web addresses, the same phone number, the same office and the same real photographs of you. It is much faster, easier to read and easier to use, and every page now has a Spanish version.

- Faster on phones. On a typical page, the main content used to take about 8.1 seconds to appear on a mid-range phone. It now takes about 1.7 seconds. Each page downloads about 131 KB instead of 846 KB.
- Top marks on Google's quality test. On the typical page, the scores went from 54 / 90 / 81 / 100 to 100 / 100 / 100 / 100 (speed / accessibility / good practice / search basics).
- Easier to use for people with disabilities. The automated accessibility test found 73 serious problems across the 24 old pages (each kind of problem counted once per page). It found none on any of the 60 new pages. Automated tests cannot catch everything, so the new Accessibility Statement tells visitors how to report a problem.
- Easier to read. The writing dropped from about a 9th-grade reading level to about a 6th-grade level. That suits someone reading on a phone in a stressful moment.
- In Spanish too. The old site had 24 pages, all in English. The new site has 30 English and 30 Spanish pages, including new Privacy, Accessibility and Cookie Settings pages.
- Old links keep working. We found 89 old web addresses. The 24 main pages keep their exact addresses, 39 other old addresses forward to the closest new page, and 26 old WordPress short links open the home page for now (see "Known limitations").
- Nothing invented. Every fact on the new site (phone, address, hours, experience, education, memberships, reviews) is traced to an exact quote on your current site. The wording around the facts is new; the facts are not. We recorded 315 facts, each with the page it came from. Where your old site contradicted itself, we used the wording that is true under every version and wrote the question down for you. The only new promises are the privacy and accessibility commitments, which we ask you to confirm (question 4).

What we need from you is at the end of this report ("Questions for you"). None of it stops the launch.

Before and after, in numbers

"Typical page" means the middle value (the median) across pages, so one unusually slow or fast page does not skew it. The old site was measured on 24 pages. The new site was measured on the same 24 pages and on all of its tested pages (58 for speed, which leaves out the two "page not found" pages; 60 for accessibility). Speed tests simulate a mid-range phone on a mobile connection.

What we measured	Old site (median of 24 pages)	New site, same 24 pages (median of 24 pages)	New site, every tested page (median of 58 pages)
Google speed score (out of 100)	54	100	100
Google accessibility score (out of 100)	90	100	100
Google good-practice score (out of 100)	81	100	100
Google search-basics score (out of 100)	100	100	100
Time until the main content shows	8.1 seconds	1.7 seconds	1.7 seconds
Time the page is frozen while loading	0.37 seconds	0 seconds	0 seconds
How much the page jumps while loading (0 = none)	0.003	0	0
Program code (JavaScript) in separate files per page	430 KB	0 KB	0 KB
Separate files each page requests	81	9	9
Serious + critical accessibility problems (total)	73 serious, 0 critical, on 24 pages	0 on 24 pages	0 on 60 pages
Places you can land on with the keyboard's Tab key that show no outline	787 of 1,241	0 of 1,440	0 of 3,237
Reading grade level (school grade needed to read it easily)	about 9.3	about 6 (median of 30 English pages)	—
Pages	24 (English only)	—	30 English + 30 Spanish

Where these numbers come from. Speed and quality scores come from Lighthouse, Google's free page-testing tool (`audit/lighthouse-before.json` for the old site, `qa/lighthouse.json` for the new one). Accessibility counts come from axe, a widely used automated accessibility checker (`audit/axe-before.json` , `qa/axe.json`). The old site's search-basics score was already 100 on the typical page. Its search problems were in the words, not the technical setup: no main headline on any page, and "Murfreesboro" misspelled in 15 titles.

How the reading grade was worked out. The old site's grade (about 9.3, median) comes from our content review (`audit/A03.md`). For the new site we ran a standard Flesch-Kincaid estimate on the body text of each of the 30 English pages. We counted sentences, words and syllables, using a common rule of thumb for syllables. Headings, layout notes, internal notes and link addresses were removed first. We then took the median. Depending on small choices in how sentences and syllables are counted, the result is between about 5.6 and 6.5, so we call it "about 6". The short "page not found" and "thank you" pages read easiest; Home, Legal Services and the Accessibility Statement read hardest. As a cross-check, the same counters run on the old site's saved text give between 8.5 and 9.9. Either way, the new writing is about three grade levels easier to read.

One honest caveat. The old site was measured live over the internet. The new site was measured on a copy running on our own test machine, with the same simulated phone and connection. Once the site is live on Cloudflare (the company that will host it), real visitors may see somewhat different times. We expect the gap to hold (about 8 seconds down to about 2), because each new page downloads about one-sixth as much data.

How the pages look on a phone

NEW SITE

The new contact page features a header with a language selector "Se habla español · Ver esta página en español", the logo "WILL FRALEY", the phone number "(615) 410-7290", and a blue menu icon. Below the header is a "< Home" link. A profile picture of Will Fraley is shown next to the text "ATTORNEY AT LAW Will Fraley 509 W College St, Murfreesboro". The main heading is "Contact Will Fraley in Murfreesboro". Below this is the text "Start with a phone call. Call (615) 410-7290 for a free consultation." followed by "Prefer to write? Send a short message below. Se habla español." A large blue button with a phone icon says "Call (615) 410-7290". Below this is the text "Free consultation · Se habla español". At the bottom, a section titled "How to reach the office" contains a blue button with a phone icon saying "Call (615) 410-7290 · Free consultation".

The old Contact page opens straight into a seven-question form. The new one starts with a phone call, then offers a short message as a second choice.

The three designs we considered, and the one we built

We built three working sample designs of the Home, Criminal Defense and Contact pages.

- A, "Counsel": calm and serious, built on strong type, your logo blue and plenty of white space.
- B, "Verdict": bold and direct, with dark bands and a bright gold call button.
- C, "Neighbor": warm and local, with a large town photograph and sandy tones.

We built A, "Counsel." Most people who find you are on a phone and in trouble. They may have been charged last night, be worried about a family member, or be facing a custody fight. On a phone, Counsel's first screen gives them what you do, "practicing since 2004", a large "Call (615) 410-7290" button, "Se habla español" and a one-tap switch to Spanish. It uses few pictures, so it loads fastest. Its calm look suits a worried parent as well as someone facing a charge. Verdict felt harsh for family cases. Neighbor put its call button lower and loaded slowest.

We borrowed two touches from the other designs. From B, the call button at the top of every phone screen shows the full number. From C, a small photo of you sits beside your name near the top of most pages.

What we kept, and why

- Every page address. All 24 page addresses are unchanged. Of the other old addresses we found (old page names, image links, feeds, sitemaps), 39 send visitors to the closest new page in one step, and 26 old WordPress short links open the home page until one Cloudflare setting is added (see "Known limitations"). This protects what you have earned in Google and keeps old links working.
- Your facts, exactly. Phone (615) 410-7290, 509 W College St, inbox@willfraleylaw.com, the office hours, "practicing law since 2004", your Nashville School of Law degree and your memberships. Each is copied from your current site, and each is traced to the page it came from.
- Your photographs. Your two portraits (at your desk, and in the brick doorway) and Katie Fults's photograph. They are cropped and color-matched only, never retouched or imitated. Your two training certificates are shown as documents on the About page.
- Your logo and its blue (#447CB7), used as the base of the new color scheme.
- Your three client reviews, word for word. They keep their original wording, including one that is cut off and one with a missing word, because changing a client's words is not ours to do. Star graphics were dropped until we know where the reviews were posted. Each sits beside "Prior results do not guarantee a similar outcome."
- The legal disclaimer's substance: the site is general information, not legal advice, and reading it does not create an attorney-client relationship.
- The DCS and Adoption pages. None of the competing local firm sites we reviewed has a DCS page.

What we fixed

These are the ten main problems from the website audit (audit/AUDIT.md), and what the new site does about each.

1. Hard to call you. The number appeared in the body of only one page, a sentence on three pages was missing it ("...online or at to get started"), and some buttons went nowhere. Now: the number is a tap-to-call link in the header, the opening section, mid-page, the footer and a bar along the bottom of every phone screen. Every "free consultation" offer sits right beside it. The broken sentence is gone, and the final check found no broken links.
2. Slow on phones. About 8 seconds to show the main content. Now: about 1.7 seconds, with no page-builder code, two typefaces stored on the site, and right-sized modern images.

3. "Se habla español" with nothing in Spanish. Now: a full Spanish version of every page at `/es/`, with Spanish web addresses, a language switch on every page and a Spanish contact form.
4. Facts that disagreed with each other (years of experience stated 11 ways, seven firm names, two Friday closing times). Now: only wording that is true under every version: "Practicing law since 2004", "Will Fraley, Attorney at Law", Friday until 4:00. The open questions are listed for you below.
5. Wording the Tennessee advertising rules flag ("experts", "premier", "aggressive", reviews with no disclaimer). Now: plain, accurate language, no comparisons with other lawyers, and the results disclaimer wherever a review appears. An automated check blocks risky words before anything is published.
6. Google couldn't tell what each page was about. There was no main headline, and 15 titles misspelled the city. Now: each page has one clear headline, its own correct title and its own description. Theft and Drug Crimes are full pages now.
7. Hard to use with a keyboard, a screen reader (software that reads the screen aloud) or larger text. Now: built to WCAG 2.2 AA, the accessibility standard most often used for websites, with a visible outline on every keyboard stop, tested color contrast, a natural form order and nothing that moves by itself. The new Accessibility Statement explains how to report a problem.
8. No privacy policy, cookie choice or accessibility statement, while Google Analytics ran without asking. Now: Privacy, Cookie Settings and Accessibility Statement pages in English and Spanish, linked in every footer. No tracking runs at all at launch. The form warns visitors not to send confidential details.
9. Too much in the way. A 27-link menu loaded four times per page, and an 18-link sidebar. Now: one menu with six items, the phone number and a language switch. The bottom call bar never covers a form field.
10. A borrowed look (stock handcuffs and gavels, computer screenshots, five typefaces). Now: your real photos first, one type pairing, a sharp logo, and newly made scenes of Middle Tennessee and law-office settings. None of these scenes shows a person.

Images

- Reused from your site: 6 images. These are your two portraits, Katie Fults's photograph, the logo and your two training certificates (`inventory/assets.json`, verdict "reuse").
- Newly generated: 33 images were kept: 24 used across the new site and 9 made for the three sample designs. Together they cost 66 credits (`images/GENERATED.json`). Counting the 7 attempts we rejected and remade, 80 credits were spent in total (26 for the samples and 54 for the site, `plan/DECISIONS.md`). Every generated image is a scene, object or texture: Middle Tennessee roads, rivers and porches, courthouse-square architecture with no readable signs, and office interiors. None shows a person or a face. Each prompt is saved alongside its image.

Questions for you

There are 151 notes in `NEEDS-OWNER.md`, the full list of questions from everyone who worked on the site. Many repeat the same question. Grouped, they come down to the 23 questions below, most important first, each with the pages it affects. Until you answer, the site uses the safest true wording, so none of these stops the launch.

Please answer before launch

1. Spanish pages (all pages under `/es/`, especially the Theft page): Can a Spanish speaker at the office read the Spanish pages once? Who helps a caller who speaks only Spanish? Should "theft" read robo or hurto?
2. Bar standing and memberships (About page, footer): Is your license in good standing on tbpr.org? What year were you admitted to the Tennessee bar? Which memberships are current (TBA, Rutherford and Cannon County Bar, TACDL), and are you a member of the Tennessee Association for Justice?
3. Statements about Tennessee law (DUI, Fraud, Sex Crimes, Domestic Assault, Divorce, Child Custody, Visitation, Paternity, Personal Injury and FAQs pages, in English and Spanish): Are the general statements carried over from your old site still correct? Examples: DUI penalties in general terms, equitable distribution in divorce, "best interests of the child", sex-offender registration, "many fraud charges are felonies", and the personal-injury FAQ answers. We kept them general and dropped every specific number.
4. Privacy Policy, Accessibility Statement and Cookie Settings pages (English and Spanish): Can you read them once? How long do you keep website messages? Is it true that you never sell or share them?

Facts your old site stated more than one way

5. Experience (Home, About, footer): May we say "over 20 years"? (Now: "practicing law since 2004".) What year did you open your own firm?
6. Firm name and your name (every page; About): Is the name "Will Fraley, Attorney at Law" or another registered name? Is "Raymond Wilford Fraley, III" exactly as on your bar record?
7. Friday hours (footer of every page, Contact): Do you close at 4:00 or 5:00 on Fridays? (Now: 4:00, as in your old footer.) Are calls answered after hours?
8. Who is on the team (About, family-law pages, Testimonials): Is Katie Fults still with the firm, and what does she handle? Is Melissa Harris still with you?
9. Where you practice (Home and every practice page): Which counties and courts do you appear in? Do you take federal cases? Should Smyrna and La Vergne be named?
10. Free consultation (every page with a call button): Is the consultation free for every kind of case, including adoption, DCS and injury? Is it by phone, in person or both?
11. Personal injury (Personal Injury page): Do you take these cases now, and on a contingency fee (paid only if the client recovers money)?

Photos, logo and reviews

12. Logo (header and footer of every page): Can you send the original design file (SVG, AI, EPS or PDF)? Would you like a white version for dark backgrounds?
13. Photos (Home, About): Can you send larger originals of your portraits and of Katie's photo?
14. Reviews (Testimonials page and the review boxes on other pages): Can you send the full text of Katherine S.'s review (it stops at "I highly recommend")? Where was each review posted? Do all three clients still agree to their use? Do you have a review from a criminal-defense client?
15. In the News page: What is the exact headline of the October 5, 2014 Daily News Journal story? What was "Daily News Journal Article 2" meant to link to?

The contact form and calls

16. Form fields (Contact page): Is it fine to require only name and phone, with email and a note optional?
17. Text messages (Contact page, Privacy Policy): Do you text clients? (The new form signs no one up for texts.)
18. Response time, parking, jail visits (Contact, Thank-you and Criminal Defense pages): Would you like to state a callback time or parking directions? Do you visit clients at the Rutherford County jail?

Optional, when you have time

19. Visitor statistics (every page; Privacy Policy, Cookie Settings): May the site count visits with Google Analytics, only after a visitor agrees? It is off now.
20. New topics (new pages): Do you handle orders of protection, expungement, juvenile cases or uncontested divorce? If so, we can add pages for them.
21. Results (none are shown on the site now): Is there a case count or outcome you are willing to publish, with documentation?
22. Old footer (footer of every page): Should the copyright start in 2019? Does your web-design agreement require a credit?
23. Google Business Profile (Contact, footer map link): What is the exact business name, and what is its Google Maps link?

Known limitations

- Nothing is blocked. The quality review's last three small visual issues were fixed and re-tested (`plan/BLOCKED.md`). All ten final quality checks pass.
- The contact form is switched off until the operator connects the service that delivers form messages to your inbox. Until then, the Contact page shows your phone number and email instead. No tracking of any kind runs at launch.
- Old WordPress short links (addresses like `willfraleylaw.com/?p=95`) cannot be redirected by the upload alone. Until a Cloudflare setting is added, they open the home page. The steps are in `HANDOFF.md` .
- A missing Spanish page shows the English "page not found" page. That page still has the phone number and a link to Spanish.

- Some photos are small originals. Your portraits and Katie's photo are shown no larger than their original size, so they stay sharp. Larger originals would let us show them bigger.
- The before/after speed comparison mixes a live measurement (old) with a test-machine measurement (new), as explained above. A few old pages also had 2–6 files fail to load during the old-site test.
- The Spanish pages have not yet been read by a native speaker at your office (question 1).
